Lawsuit and Food Board Game

The invention at issue comprises the rules and apparatus for playing an educational, legal, and gustatory based game intended to produce fun. The board-game includes a decoder ring for each of the plurality of players (a concession to purveyors of identity politics), a food package insert comprising a multi-part structure having at least one removable portion, politically coded play money, handcuffs to prevent participants from eating ineligible food, appeal cards, a grease resistant cellulose support web, jury nullification dice, and edible weaponry. The spaces instruct players either to bring a simulated lawsuit or to act as a result of a simulated circumstance associated with being a member of an associated gustatory industry. The colored film insert is printed with the second color and is at least partially transparent for revealing a hidden image printed on one of the interior surfaces. Further, the game includes a value generator configured to generate a worth (minus nausea and bloating) based on the selected probability-influencing indicia. The generated value (in addition to gustatory enjoyment) determines a winner.

Poem coding and retrieval system and method thereof

A solution expressed as a search organization with coded content information consisting of available poems and a search method using same technology. Using the strategies of poemNET, the process time for searching the information at hand can be greatly reduced. At the zenith of the system, poemNET, is the ability to search the content of poems through the lens of the reader. But not only that, the system is capable of using variable (Marxist, PoMo, deconstructionist, feminist, Freudian, Lacanian, etc.) reading strategies in order to generate various contents, which are then available for a poemNET capable search. This is truly a solution in the IT usage of the word. But poemNet is not fragmented. It merely uses fragmented strategies to produce the unitary consciousness of agreement. A motto of this technology might be: Diversity is Nice, but Agreement is Better. The goal, of course, is to teach user's to be better liberals through a complex of assorted literary devices.

Animal Display

A warm room for cool heads is provided for cold-blooded animals or creatures, such as snakes, by casting rock-like formations into livable representations of dwelling gatherings. Predetermined contours of our lives should not be forgotten. A constant-volume-inlet-valve and a constant-volume-outlet-valve provide for stable air flow within each individual drawer while the exhaust air is expelled to a low pressure exhaust duct. Life, the snake will find, is always better with a soundtrack played at high volume. Exhaustion will ensue and the snake will sleep as he is wont to do. A heating device is provided to promote comforting dreams and an attachment to man's underlying ideological commitments. The lesson of the display (and it is just a cage, let's remember) is: Do not attempt escape. You will die in the world. This is man's world. You will die in man's world. Stay here in this display. Do not slither away.

Patent Application (4)

“Spoon”: Food Retrieval System

An atypical search engine for foods with manual override and search method the same as the user (hereafter known as the “Eater”). The system includes a handle (frosted, beveled, polished, hammered, all qualify as spoons and are thus subject to this patent) and a scoop. This, if I might add, is the genius (and the legal originality) of the design: the novel combination of scoop and handle. The angle of the scoop may be as severe as any eater might wish. The key is that the “spoon” is able to search through any number of foods, provided they are not inordinately dense (such as bones or tough meat) and bring these foods (and thus their tastes) into the eater’s mouth (and thus her body). The search-engine adheres to the user’s brain and is therefore capable of ever so many majesties. When foods are entered into the “spoon” they may be rather immediately brought to the eater’s mouth. To prevent disease and other roommate fatalities the “spoon” needs to be cleansed. But this is no more than a momentary procedure and should not hassle the user a great deal. Unfortunately, as the technology exists today there is no database for storing information as either MS word documents, spreadsheets, or taste matrixes. But do not worry, my dear patent reader, these technologies are on their way. For now this will have to do. My company, Oneida, will refile when these technologies have successfully been brought to market.

How do you get where you are? A dispensing apparatus includes recirculating systems through which the dispersants are recirculated to prevent settling of solid components, such as pigments that may be present in the dispersants. That is, our personalities will all get mixed up in the wash. This, of course, brings up the question of how you know who you are. The table is positioned to dispense a selected dispersant into a container placed atop a weighing scale through the dispenser selected in accordance with a fancy recipe. You will be poured out of the spout; or rather, the process is continued until all of the desired dispersants are dispensed into the container to form the composition, such as an automotive paint.

A Hatred

I hate finding out that a store I love is part of a chain. I hate that realization. This is an occurrence that is becoming more and more common, almost to the point of ubiquity. The feeling associated with this experience could be called “that surprised chain feeling” and I’m not quite sure where it fits in the spectrum of feelings. It’s a kind of disappointment mixed with the feeling of betrayal. Contempt is involved. The sort of guilt one feels at Starbucks is also associated with it. And, not least, the sinking feeling of embarrassment is also inextricably bound to it. The philosophically interesting point about “the surprised chain feeling” is that it revolves around the dichotomy between original and copy. The original item, or store in this case, is always more valuable than its copy. But, as has been shown by contemporary philosophers, the original depends upon the existence of the copy for its identity as original. There is always the fear in life that you’re not an original; that you are merely a copy of someone else’s way of living; that you haven’t really decided, merely taken someone else’s word that you’ve decided on your life. This is the fear that is brought to the fore when you discover that something you love is merely a copy, merely a franchise, and also, and more generally, merely a commodity. This fear also has a positive side. It is similar to the philosopher Richard Rorty’s idea of the ironist. He writes that when the ironist “philosophizes about her situation, she does not think her vocabulary is closer to reality than others, that it is in touch with a power not herself.” The ironist isn’t interested in the authentic, unique experience, because she knows that it is possible that every authentic, unique experience is underwritten by an experience that is merely a copy, merely a franchise. As a human in the postmodern world it is important to be able to swirl an experience or idea back and forth in the mouth between your ironic taste-buds and your sincere ones. As citizens of the postmodern world we must look both ironically and sincerely at “that surprised chain feeling”. We must see the experience both as the horrible homogenized product of globalization and as that which allows us to see that we are never authentic, that we are never unique, but eloquent constructions of chosen language. Still, I hate this feeling. I want original stores. I want original products. I want original poems.

I have noticed that about 50 miles or so up the coast there is another tree with roughly the same form as “the lone cypress”. The only difference between the two trees is that this other tree is fairly scrawny as trees go. My question is: if I take a photograph of this other tree and title the resulting photo “Lone Cypress,” do I need to obtain your permission?

To everyone at Calvin Klein,

Let me explain my situation: My wife, Carolyn Kousky, has a birthday on April 11th (this Friday). As you might have noticed, her initials are the same as Mr. Klein's and I'm not sure if Mr. Klein is aware of this or not, but his initials (as well as Carolyn's) are the opposite of Kenneth Cole's initials. How interesting! I was wondering if you would like to give her a gift certificate because she has the same initials as Mr. Klein, you know, in the spirit of things. It would make her very happy and I'm sure it will make all of you excited to know that someone with the same initials as your boss is wearing the underwear you so dutifully create. Anyway, let me know, your products fill me with joy. I am so sorry to hear that your boss, like so many of our finest citizens, has succumbed to substance abuse. However, it gladdens my heart to know that he is seeking help.

Thank you for your exuberant designs and time.
Hopefully you will send my wife a gift certificate,

I hate saying Vente Coffee. Although I sometimes sell out and give into frequenting Starbucks I refuse to order a “Vente Coffee.” I always say, “I’d like a big coffee,” or “Can I get a large cup of coffee?” or even indicate what I want using the ordered pair “(coffee, large).” But I will never ever say “Vente Coffee.” Nobody else should use these words either. They make customers look like they actually believe they are fancy enough to be in Tuscany just because they can order a cup of coffee. However, Starbucks’ clientele obviously knows this is not the case. They know they’re just regular people trying to drink a good cup of coffee. So I say, Stop saying Vente and invoke the solidity of the middle class by staying plain and saying large. I hate it. I won’t do it.

Episode Summary:

Donald comes home from football practice on Saturday afternoon. An irreversible, untreatable, and invariably fatal disease threatens to wipe out the whole world. He wipes his nose on a tee-shirt and then discovers that his dad, Thomas, is upset because Don left the house without doing his chores or helping out with the fence. Thomas has been talking about that fence since Don was a young child. It has never been finished. Now parts of it are rotting at the bottom. Tom harshly reprimands Don for going to football practice instead of doing his chores. The fence falls down. Everyone can now see the naked people and there's an infectious disease to boot. This episode establishes that Tom and Don are strong, normally silent, types with deep caring sides capable of sweeping misery from the world.

A Food of Sorts

A data logger records a time/temperature profile for the preparation and cooling of a prepared food by recording only those timed points specified on a specific food preparation protocol. A composition for stabilizing various types of meat (including avocado and cheese) is disclosed and admixed in a color-stabilizing amount with other meats (including other substances) to form a color-stabilized concentrate. The method reforms small pieces of natural cheese or other dairy products (such as shreds, trim, or offcuts) and feeds the small pieces through a mechanical pump and die that transforms the product into a cohesive larger chunk. An apparatus for converting a kettle-type food cooker into a food smoker includes an upright cylindrical housing having an open top and bottom with a grill support at its upper end and a water pan support at its lower end. An improved meal-substitute food bar is thus generated, herein called a meal-equivalent food bar because it is divided into segments equivalent to the sequence of courses in a conventional meal, including appetizer with functional appetite stimulants; main-course with major nutritional requirements intact; and desert with functional appetite depressants. A barbecue oven, on the other hand, has an internal firewall separating a cooking chamber and a fire chamber and thus burns all food-like substances to ash.

Media Directive (fourteen killer apps.)

Disconnect infected computers from the network so as to prevent the virus spreading further during preparations. Cut around the 12 segments (gores) that make up the globe. Cut right in between the gores so your scissors almost touch the equator. Locate the screw in the metal numbered semi meridian. With a flat-head screw driver, loosen and remove the screw. Consider the person who will receive the globe and what the globe will be used for. Will it be merely functional (allowing a student to visualize the world), or will it be displayed as an artistic piece? Smell the computer. If it stinks repeat debugging procedure.

“We might want to start tearing the tickets. The formal list is correct, but the stub registers the wrong beginning time.”

Scene Summary:

While surrounded by a complete language, Joeguin manages to pull (like taffy, like taffy my friend) the pistol from WaltBen and turn it on the assembled portrait of modern man and his unwanted urge to philosophy. They are always claiming and claiming, but sometimes they must (I'm not sure what the force of that must is if you must know) stop passively in silence. The gun must warm up before Joeguin can possibly use it. What else is there but to rub the gun, to massage it, to friction the words from history's ghost? In the erotic interlude, WaltBen manages to flee and eventually falls into the hands of the other tribe on the island—"The Insiders."

System and method for spinning music

A method of spinning music, of wrapping it around breath to breath, beat to beat, but simultaneously of escaping the personal. This puzzle had always mustered voices, but the drums had always clapped at precisely the wrong times. This time the company has the arrangement right in the bag, woman in the sack with her beautiful voice. This is not criminal. This is merely a capitalist tool for making money, but it can be used to make the music of saints. Said method includes steps of: (a) measuring at least one input value of a parameter of the monitorable stage of the process; (b) measuring at least one output value of the parameter of the monitorable stage of the process; and (c) utilizing at least one input value and the at least one output value for constructing a process output empirical model for uncovering a functional relationship between the at least one input value and at least one output value. You know how to close your eyes. You know how to open your eyes. If you commit these actions at the same time I am saying you have infringed on my patent outlined here.

“She makes plastic things out of other plastic things. That’s what it means to be a plastic artist.”

Trail Description:

Start at the Salmon’s Egg Ranger Station. Please sign in with a uniformed official who will be smoking a pipe on the front porch. Check the bulletin board for trail closures, furniture advertisements, job listings, and information concerning the famed salmon runs. To begin, turn south (left) at the highway and walk a very few steps to the Red Plank Trail billboard. Cross several streams. Look for salmon. Stretch your legs uphill through alder, hemlock, and Douglas fir. Soon you’re contouring around a slope and back where you started. Don’t you wish you looked at the salmon longer? Let that be a lesson to you. Always look longer.

These are not photographs. Excuse me, that’s not a dead leg.

That is not blood. Please blame it on the other day.

Some other jewelry – I might understand voices poised in necklaces. Gift: It’s just a start. I’ll get you another ounce later this month. There will be more. I promise. Once I see you again there will be more. I’m sorry I haven’t seen you more. It’s not a problem with you. It’s just the job I’m in, the situation I have with my job, and the work they give me, and the other things and responsibilities and friendships and relationships I want to be in and the ones in which I have no interest. They’re anchoring me down and yet they make me sour but still I keep up with them. I wish I wasn’t so sour, but I know apologies won’t succeed. I know that sarcasm won’t get me through, but the aesthetic life might not matter now that I’m gone.

War Media System

This revolution in military affairs (RMA) consists primarily of a minutely targeted media system, which includes a biometrically accessible storage disk. The main advantage of the system is that after successful completion of the background check you will no longer be forced to have your luggage scanned for bombs (therefore, opening the window). The media organization file includes at least two media-selection parameters and associations from your past so that all who are psychically connected with you are able to become your allies in an all-out no-holds-barred cultural war. The system is configured and operated using software to provide passenger entertainment services including audio and video on-demand, information dissemination, product and service order processing, video teleconferencing and data communication services. The method comprises procedures for storing viewer preference information and subsequently characterizing media programs selected by a first user's memory and transmitting (at least!) a portion of these preferences to a second user for storage in a memory for later nostalgia and anxiety concerning other minds. In the preferred embodiment, the media system further includes a means for playing the plurality of suitable media clips, which, of course, can then be used to bomb targets and later apologized for at the suitable (and required) press conferences.
